ISAAC SCHWARTZ
(1923-2009)

Born in Romny, Ukraine. He learned the piano as a youth and this enabled him to earn a modest living giving piano lessons. He took composition lessons from V.G. Ferre. After World War II, Dmitri Shostakovich helped Schwartz gain entry to the Rimsky-Korsakov Conservatory in Leningrad from whence he graduated with a diploma in composition. He was a prolific and successful film composer but also composed music for ballets, theatrical performances and television.

ALEXANDER SCRIABIN
(1872-1915)

Born in Moscow. At the age of 10, he became a piano pupil of Georgi Conyus and two years later began to study composition with Sergei Taneyev. Entering the Moscow Conservatory, he studied piano with Vasily Safonov and continued his composition training with Taneyev and then with Anton Arensky. He became an important if controversial composer and pianist whose work, infused with mysticism, was a major influence on those who came after him. Most of his compositions are for solo piano with few other orchestral works, besides a Piano Concerto, beyond his Symphonies.

ALEXANDER SHCHETYNSKY
(b. 1960, UKRAINE)

Born in Kharkov. He studied composition with Valentyn Borysov, but was strongly influenced by the composer Valentyn Bibik. He was also inspired by the works of Soviet musical avant-garde composers such as Edison Denisov, Alfred Schnittke, Arvo Pärt, Sofia Gubaidulina and Valentin Silvestrov. Later on, he attended the master classes with Edison Denisov and Poul Ruders in Denmark as well as summer courses in Poland, where leading modern composers including Louis Andriessen and Krzysztof Penderecki were the lecturers. He taught composition, instrumentation, and techniques of contemporary music at the Kharkov Art Institute for a number of years and then became a free-lance composer. His compositions cover various genres ranging from solo instrumental to orchestral, choral pieces and operas.

IGOR STRAVINSKY
(1882-1971)

Born in Oranienbaum, near St. Petersburg. He began piano, harmony and counterpoint lessons at age 9, and, after a gap of a decade, studied theory with Fyodor Akimenko and Vasily Kalafati and then had private composition lessons with Nikolai Rimsky-Korsakov over the course of several years. He went on to become one of the greatest composers of the 20th century without ever having been enrolled in any conservatory or receiving any kind of musical degree. His success as a composer began early with the ballets he wrote for Sergei Diaghilev and continued for nearly the rest of his life. He left Russia for Switzerland in 1914, moved on to France in 1920 and then to the United States at the outbreak of World War II in 1939. He composed prolifically throughout his long life and there were hardly any genres of music that he did not compose for. In addition, he committed practically everything he wrote to recordings that he, or his assistant, Robert Craft, conducted personally. Recorded examples of Stravinsky's "Symphonies of Wind Instruments" are not included in the following discography. Stravinsky himself is quoted as admitting that "the piece is not a symphony in the classical sense, which would imply the organization of the thematic material in accordance with the spirit of sonata form: hence the title "Symphonies of Wind Instruments" and not "Symphonies for Wind Instruments." I have used the term 'symphony' in its strictly etymological sense of the 'symphonizing,' or playing together, of a group of instruments."

ALEXANDER TCHEREPNIN (1899-1977)

Born in St. Petersburg, the son of Nikolai Tcherepnin (1873-1945). His early musical training was somewhat informal, but as his father was friends with the elite of Russian musicians who often filled his household, Alexander began composing at an early age. He attended the Petrograd Conservatory briefly but the Russian Civil War forced his family to move to Tbilisi where his father obtained a teaching job and Alexander studied composition with Thomas de Hartmann. The Tcherepnins left Russia for Paris in 1921 where Alexander studied piano with Isidor Philipp and composition with Paul Vidal. He then toured as a concert pianist and wandered among various countries before settling in Chicago where he taught at De Paul University. He composed a vast amount of music in genres ranging from operas to solo instrumental pieces. His other major orchestral works include a cycle of 6 Piano Concertos. His 2 sons, Sergey (b. 1941) and Ivan (b. 1943) are both composers.

YEVGENY TIKOTSKY
(1893-1970, BELARUS)

Born in St. Petersburg. His music education was limited to private studies of the piano and theory in St Petersburg but in composition he was essentially self-taught. With the advice of his friend, the composer Vladimir Deshevov (1889-1955), he composed a symphony and some operas at age of 14. After war service, he found himself in Belarus, where he taught in a music school and absorbed himself with Belorussian folk music. At this point his serious career in composition began and, moving to Minsk, he taught at the music school and worked as a staff composer for Belorussian radio. He composed operas, orchestral, chamber, choral and vocal works as well as folksong arrangements, incidental music and film scores. His unrecorded Symphonies are: Nos. 1, Op. 5 (1924-7), 2, Op.19 (1941) and 5, Op. 53 (1958).
