NIKOLAI RIMSKY-KORSAKOV
(1844-1908)

Born into a family of landless nobility in the small provincial town of Tikhvin, east of St. Petersburg. He had piano lessons and an introduction to the classics as a child, but his road to musical fame began when he met Mily Balakirev. The latter not only brought him into contact with the publisher Stasov and other composers, but also guided Rimsky in the composition of his Symphony No. 1. Despite his lack of much formal training, he was appointed professor of composition and orchestration at the St. Petersburg Conservatory, a school he would teach at until almost the very end of his life. As a composer, he produced music in various genres but is best known for his colorful operas and orchestral works.

NIKOLAI ROSLAVETZ
(1881-1944)

Born in Dushatin, Chernigov Region, Ukraine. As a child he began to teach himself to play the violin by ear and soon became part of a popular village string ensemble led by his uncle. Moving to Kursk, he acquired formal instruction in the violin and basic theory and harmony in classes given by Arkady Abaza under the auspices of the Russian Music Society. Years later, he attended the Moscow Conservatory where he studied the violin under Jan Hrímalý and composition under Alexander Il'insky and Sergei Vasilenko. After graduation, he began to establish himself as a modernist composer, formulating a new system of tone organization. Naturally, the Soviet authorities frowned on his work and he was eventually banished to Central Asia where he studied folk music and his name was removed from all Soviet musical reference books. His compositions, which have seen a recent revival, ranged over various genres included orchestral, chamber, instrumental and choral works.

ANTON RUBINSTEIN
(1829-1894)

Born in Vihvatynets, Podolsk Region, Ukraine. After early piano lessons from his mother, he studied with piano teacher A.I. Villoing. In Berlin, he received counterpoint and harmony lessons from Siegfried Dehn, who had also taught Mikhail Glinka. He became one of the greatest pianists of the 19th century, concertizing all over Europe. In addition, he and the Grand Duchess Yelena Pavlovna founded the Russian Musical Society and the St. Petersburg Conservatory. He was an extremely prolific composer of stage, orchestral, chamber, piano and vocal music. His Symphony No. 2 and Piano Concertos were very famous and frequently performed during his lifetime. His brother Nikolai Rubinstein (1835-1881) was also an outstanding pianist, conductor and teacher.

ALEXANDER SCRIABIN
(1872-1915)

Born in Moscow. At the age of 10, he became a piano pupil of Georgi Conyus and two years later began to study composition with Sergei Taneyev. Entering the Moscow Conservatory, he studied piano with Vasily Safonov and continued his composition training with Taneyev and then with Anton Arensky. He became an important if controversial composer and pianist whose work, infused with mysticism, was a major influence on those who came after him. Except for his Symphonies and Piano Concerto, most of his compositions are for solo piano.

PETER ILYICH TCHAIKOVSKY – separate file

ALEXANDER TCHEREPNIN (1899-1977)

Born in St. Petersburg, the son of Nikolai Tcherepnin (1873-1945). His early musical training was somewhat informal, but as his father was a friend of the elite of Russian musicians who often filled his household, Alexander began composing at an early age. He attended the Petrograd Conservatory briefly but the Russian Civil War forced his family to move to Tbilisi where his father obtained a teaching job and Alexander studied composition with Thomas de Hartmann. The Tcherepnins left Russia for Paris in 1921 where Alexander studied piano with Isidor Philipp and composition with Paul Vidal. He then toured as a concert pianist and wandered among various countries before settling in Chicago where he taught at De Paul University. His sons Ivan and Sergey also became composers. He composed a vast amount of music in genres ranging from operas to solo instrumental pieces. His Suite Géorgienne for Piano and Strings, Op. 57 (1938) and Romance for Violin and Small Orchestra (1922) have not been recorded.
