JACQUES IBERT (1890-1962)

Born in Paris. He studied at the Paris Conservatory with André Gédalge and Gabriel Fauré. In addition to composing he had a career as an administrator with his most important post being head of the Académie de France of Rome. He two most popular orchestral works are "Éscales" and "Divertissement" but his output was quite large including operas, ballets, film scores and much else for orchestra, chamber groups, solo instruments and voice. Some lesser-known orchestral pieces are his symphonic poem "Noel en Picardie," "Ballade de la Geôle de Reading" and the symphonic scherzo "Féerique."

VINCENT D'INDY (1851-1931)

Born in Paris. As a child prodigy, he studied the piano with Louis Diémer and Antoine-Franois Marmontel and harmony with Albert Lavignac but initially taught himself composition by studying the scores of his great predecessors as well as various textbooks. Later on he became a pupil of César Franck at the Paris Conservatory. His own academic career was highlighted by his co-founding with Alexandre Guilmant and Charles Bourdes of the Schola Cantorem where he became director and went on to teach composition to, among many others, Erik Satie, Albert Roussel, Albéric Magnard, Arthur Honegger, Darius Milhaud and Joseph Canteloube. He composed operas, chamber, instrumental, vocal and a significant number of large orchestral works that have been well-represented on recordings. Only one of his Symphonies, the early "Jean Hunyade" (1875) has not yet been recorded.

Some other orchestral works include "Jour d'Été à la Montagne," the symphonic trilogy "Wallenstein," "Tableaux de Voyages," "Poème des Rivages," "Istar Variations" and "Diptyque Méditerranéen."

DÉSIRÉ-EMILE INGHELBRECHT (1880-1965)

Born in Paris. Having learned the violin as a child, he studied at the Paris Conservatory from which he was expelled. After working as an orchestral player, he began an illustrious career as a conductor. He founded the Orchestre National de la Radio Française in 1934 and later became chief conductor of the Paris Opera. He composed operas and ballets as well as orchestral, chamber, instrumental and vocal works.

ANDRÉ JOLIVET
(1905-1974)

Born in Paris to a highly cultured family. He began his musical studies as a child and had several years of tutelage from Paul Le Flem. He was propelled into a modernist direction by his acquaintance with Edgard Varese and with a number of like-inclined composers such as Yves Baudrier, Daniel-Lesur and Olivier Messiaen formed La Jeune France whose purpose was the promotion of contemporary French music. He worked as a conductor and taught at the Paris Conservatory and produced a vast amount of music ranging from operas to solo pieces for instruments and voices. Beyond the Symphonies listed below, Jolivet composed many other substantial orchestral works including a "Symphonie de Danse" (1940), Piano Concerto, Violin Concerto, 2 Cello Concertos, Ondes Martenot Concerto and 2 Trumpet Concertos.

CHARLES KOEHLIN
(1867-1950)

Born in Paris. At the Paris Conservatory his teachers were André Gédalge, Jules Massenet and Gabriel Fauré. He pursued multiple careers as composer, teacher and writer. With Maurice Ravel and Florent Schmitt he founded the Société Musicale Indépendente whose purpose was to promote the music of contemporary composers. He composed prolifically over his long life in various genres but his catalogue is heavily weighted with orchestral and chamber music. He wrote 2 numbered Symphonies (1911-16, 1943-4) and a "Symphonie d'Hymnes" (1936) that were based on earlier material and there is also an unfinished Symphony in A minor from the 1890's but his orchestral masterpiece is his series of symphonic poems based on Kipling's "Jungle Books."

RENÉ KOERING
(b.1940)

Born in in Andlau, Alsace. He studied piano and oboe in Strasbourg and, on the advice of Pierre Boulez, he went to Darmstadt with Bruno Maderna. After 1962, he devoted himself exclusively to composition. He has written four operas, three string quartets, a concerto for violin and fifteen orchestral works. He has worked as a producer for France Musique and became its director. His earlier Symphonies are Nos. 1 for Bass Clarinet and 17 Instruments, Op. 21 (1974) and 2 (? withdrawn) as well as a Symphonie Concertante for Violin, Viola and String Orchestra (2003).

ÉDOUARD LALO
(1823-1892)

Born in Lille. He studied initially at the Lille Conservatory and later studied violin at the Paris Conservatory with François Antoine Habeneck and composition privately with Joseph Crèvecoeur. At first, he made his musical living as a violinist and teacher but composing would become increasingly important. He composed in various genres and his opera "Le Roi d'Ys" holds a small place on the fringes of the repertoire as does his ballet "Namouna." However, he is most often represented by his various concertos for stringed instruments including his so-called "Symphonie Espagnole." His other major orchestral works were 2 additional unpublished symphonies (no longer extant), Divertissement, Piano Concerto, Cello Concerto, Violin Concerto and Concerto Russe for Violin and Orchestra.

MARCEL LANDOWSKI (1915-1999)

Born in Pont-l'Abbé, Finistère to a highly cultured family. He was taught by a group of illustrious teachers both privately and then at the Paris Conservatory. They included Marguerite Long, Pierre Monteux, Noël Gallon, Henri Büsser and Philippe Gaubert. He pursued the twin careers as composer and administrator holding, among other posts, directorship of the Boulogne-Bilancourt Conservatory, musical director of the Comédie-Française , inspector-general of the Ministries of Cultural Affairs and Education and chancellor of the Institut de France.. Despite all his official capacities, Landowski composed prolifically in every genre. In addition to his Symphonies, his large-scale orchestral works include 2 Piano Concertos, Violin Concerto, Cello Concerto and the symphonic poems "Brumes," "Edina" and "L'Horloge." His Symphony No.5 "Les Lumieres de la Nuit" for chamber orchestra was premiered in 1998.

ANDRÉ MESSAGER (1853-1929)

Born in Montluçon, Allier. He studied at the Ecole Niedermeyer in Paris where Camille Saint-Saëns was his composition teacher with additional instruction from Gabriel Fauré and Eugène Gigout. In addition to composing, he was very active as a conductor and organist. As a composer he was basically a man of the theater writing ballets, operas and operettas. He is most famous for the ballet "Les Deux Pigeons" and the operetta "Veronique." His few other orchestral works include a "Suite Funabulesque" and "Impressions Orientals."

OLIVIER MESSIAEN (1908-1992)

Born in Avignon into an intellectual family. He entered the Paris Conservatory at the age of 11 and received instructions from Jean and Noël Gallon, Marcel Dupré, Maurice Emmanuel and Paul Dukas. He took teaching positions at the Ecole Normale de Musique and the Schola Cantorum and was one of the co-founders of La Jeune France. Taken prisoner during World War II, he resumed his academic and compositional activities after the Liberation. He is considered one of the greatest modern French composers and his original and varied works have received worldwide acclaim. These include his sole opera "St. François d'Assise," and his many orchestral, chamber, keyboard and vocal works many of which are infused with the composer's devout Catholicism. The "Turangalîla-Symphonie" is supplemented in his orchestral catalogue with other large works such "L'Ascension," "Chronocromie," "Couleurs de la Cité Céleste" and "Des Canyons aux Étoiles."

DARIUS MILHAUD (1892-1974)

Born in Marseille. He took violin lessons as a child before entering the Paris Conservatory where his teachers were Xavier Leroux, Charles-Marie Widor, André Gedalge and Vincent d'Indy. He spent some years in the diplomatic corps and traveled abroad where he absorbed various musical influences and spent the World War II years as an exile in America. As one of "Les Six," he was considered in the forefront of French musical modernism. Perhaps one of the most prolific of 20th century composers with hundreds of works in his catalogue in every conceivable genre, his frequently performed pieces are few. They include the ballets "La Création du Monde" and "Le Boeuf sur le Toit," the "Scaramouche Suite" for 2 Pianos and "Le Carnaval d'Aix" for Piano and Orchestra. It is only in recent years that all of his Symphonies and most of his Concertos have been recorded.

(1916-1997)

Born in Feodosiya, Crimea. He Nikiprowetzky immigrated with his parents to France in 1923 where they settled in Marseilles. He began his musical studies at the Marseilles Conservatory but left there in 1937 to enter the Conservatoire de Paris where he was a student of Simone Pié-Caussade and Louis Laloy. After World War II he pursued further studies privately with René Leibowitz. He worked as musical director of the Moroccan Radio, then in Paris for the overseas radio service. His compositions include four operas; a symphony (Symphony Logos 5), concertos for saxophone, piano, cello, and trumpet, two large religious works, a few cantatas, several pieces for solo piano; and numerous chamber works.

PAUL PARAY
(1886-1979)

Born in Le Tréport, Seine-Maritime Département, Normandy. At the Paris Conservatory his teachers were Xavier Leroux, Georges Caussade, Charles Lenepveu and Paul Vidal. He is chiefly remembered as a brilliant conductor of the French repertoire whose work is preserved by the recordings he made late in life with the Detroit Symphony Orchestra. He did not compose prolifically but his Symphonies are supplemented by the ballet "Artémis Troublée," the "Mass for the 500th Anniversary of the Death of Joan of Arc," a "Fantaisie" for Piano and Orchestra and several chamber works.

FRANCIS POULENC
 (1899-1963)

Born in Paris. His formal musical training began with piano lessons from Ricardo Viñes. He entered the circle of musicians around Erik Satie and, after service in World War I, had composition lessons from Charles Koechlin. He was part of the informal musical group "Les Six" and was a very accomplished pianist. As a composer he is the last in the line of French composers whose music is enjoyed by the greater musical public. His extensive catalogue encompasses most genres from opera to solo instrumental pieces and his Concertos for 2 Pianos, Harpsichord and Organ, ballets "Les Biches" and "Les Animaux Modèles" and choral "Gloria" are among the most popular of 20th century compositions.

YVES RAMETTE (1921-2012)

Born in Bavay, Département du Nord. At the Paris Conservatory, Jacques de la Presle was his teacher of harmony and Simonne Plé-Caussade taught him counterpoint and fugue. He took lessons in composition from Arthur Honegger at the École Normale de Musique. He also mastered several instruments and studied conducting with Eugène Bigot. In addition to composing, he taught at the Schola Cantorum, led choral groups and performed as an organist. He wrote orchestral, piano and chamber music.

MAURICE RAVEL
(1875-1937)

Born in Ciboure, Basse-Pyrénées. He studied piano as a child and later was trained at the Paris Conservatory initially by Eugène Anthiôme and Charles de Bériot but later on more importantly in counterpoint by André Gédalge and composition by Gabriel Fauré. His musical career was devoted almost exclusively to composition and he excelled at whatever genre he worked in from opera and ballet to wonderful creations for orchestra, instrumental combinations, voice and, especially, the piano. Ravel wrote no symphonies but the ballet "Daphnis et Chloé" is listed here because Ravel called it a "Symphonie Choréographique." His larger orchestral works written for the concert hall are his Piano Concerto in G, Piano Concerto in D for the Left Hand, Rapsodie Espagnole and Boléro. Most of his other famous orchestral pieces are Ravel's own orchestrations of his piano works. Though his music is markedly different from that of Debussy, the two are considered the twin giants of French musical impressionism.

NAPOLÉON-HENRI REBER
 (1807-1880)

Born in Mulhouse, Alsace. He studied with Anton Reicha and Jean François Lesueur. He became professor of harmony at the Paris Conservatory in 1851 and then succeeded Fromental Halévy as professor of composition. He composed a ballet, operas, orchestral, chamber and vocal works. His unrecorded Symphonies are Nos. 1 in D minor, 2 in C and 3 in E (all before 1850).

ERNEST REYER
 (1823-1909)

Born in Marseilles. He had some musical training in Marseilles and Algiers before studying with his aunt, Louise Farrenc, in Paris. He was an ardent admirer and imitator of Richard Wagner and thus primarily wrote only operas the most famous popular being "Sigurd" and "Salammbô." In fact, the work listed here, despite its title, is essentially an opera as well.

JEAN RIVIER (1896-1987)

Born in Villemomble, suburban Paris. His musical training, interrupted by service and a long recuperation from World War I, was completed at the Paris Conservatory where his teachers were Maurice Emmanuel, Jean Gallon and Georges Caussade. He was a leading activist in various contemporary music societies and taught at the Paris Conservatory after World War II. His compositions include operas, orchestral, chamber, instrumental and vocal music. His unrecorded Symphonies are No. 1 (1931), No. 6 "Les Présages" (1958) and No. 7 "Les Contrastes" (1971). There are also many concertos and shorter works in his orchestral catalogue.

JOSEPH GUY ROPARTZ (1864-1955)

Born in Guincamp, Côtes-du-Nord, Brittany. He studied with Théodore Dubois and Jules Massenet at the Paris Conservatory and had lessons in organ and composition with César Franck who was his main influence. He made his living as a conductor and became the director of the Academy of Nancy and later the Strasbourg Conservatory. He wrote an opera, ballets, incidental music and a vast body of works for orchestra, chamber groups, solo instruments and voice. Some of his other orchestral works are the symphonic poems "La Cloche des Morts," "Les Landes," "La Chasse de Prince Arthur," the suite "Dimanche Breton" and a Concerto for Orchestra.

ALBERT ROUSSEL
 (1869-1937)

Born in Toucoing, Département du Nord. After a naval career he began the serious study of music in his mid-twenties with Eugène Gigout before entering the Schola Cantorum for instruction by Vincent d'Indy who gave him a job on the staff. As instructor of counterpoint some of his pupils were Erik Satie, Paul Le Flem and Edgard Varèse. For the theatre his most important works are the opera "Padmâvatî," the ballets "Bacchus et Ariane," "Le Festin de l'Araignée" and "Aenées" and the incidental music to "Le Marchand de Sable qui Passe" while his other orchestral pieces include a Piano Concerto, Cello Concerto, Suite in F major, Concerto for Orchestra and "Rapsodie Flamande."

PIERRE SANCAN
(1916-2008)

Born in Mazamet, Tarn, Midi-Pyrénées. He began his musical training at the Meknès College of Music in Morocco and at the Toulouse Conservatory and then entered the Paris Conservatory where he studied harmony with Jean Gallon, conducting with Charles Munch and Roger Désormière, piano with Yves Nat and composition with Henri Büsser. He succeeded Nat as a piano professor at the Conservatory in 1956 and remained there until his retirement in 1985. The vast major of his works are short works for chamber forces, though he did compose the symphony recorded below, an opera, Ondine (1962), 3 ballets, piano and violin concertos, and a piano concertino.

FLORENT SCHMITT
(1870-1958)

Born in Blâmont, Meurthe-et-Moselle, Lorraine. After initial studies at the Nancy Conservatory, he entered the Paris Conservatory where his teachers were Théodore Dubois, Albert Lavignac, André Gédalge, Jules Massenet and Gabriel Fauré, the last two for composition. He was an academic (head of the Lyons Conservatory) and influential music critic but most of all a very prolific composer who produced music to the very end of his long life. His enormous catalogue does include some stage music notably ballets and incidental music but most of his work is for orchestra, chamber groups, solo instruments and voices. His most popular works are the suite from the ballet "La Tragédie de Salomé" and "Psaume XLVII" for Soprano, Chorus and Orchestra.
